SERVICE AGREEMENT / 01

Antivirus & malware check

Device security assessment for suspected online banking compromise

About this agreement. These terms apply between the business providing the antivirus and malware check (the Provider) and the customer requesting it (you). These terms cover only the devices and work recorded in the separately agreed job scope.

01 Purpose and service scope

The technician will assess the nominated device for signs of malware, unwanted software and security weaknesses that may relate to suspected online banking compromise. Subject to the agreed scope, work may include updating and running security tools; reviewing relevant system events, installed applications, browser extensions, startup items and remote-access software; and providing a written summary of findings and recommended next steps.

02 Your authority and permission

You confirm that you own the device or have authority from its owner and any relevant organisation to approve the work. You authorise access only to the nominated device and information reasonably necessary for the agreed assessment. Employer-managed equipment requires employer approval. Access to other devices, accounts, networks or cloud services requires separate permission.

03 What is outside the service

This is a device assessment, not a bank investigation, formal forensic examination or certification that an account is safe. The Provider does not access bank systems, decide whether transactions are authorised, determine refund eligibility, recover stolen funds or provide financial advice. Data recovery, forensic imaging, operating-system reinstallation, hardware repair and ongoing monitoring are excluded unless separately agreed in writing.

04 Banking information stays private

Do not disclose banking passwords, PINs, one-time codes, recovery codes, card security codes or authentication approvals to the technician. The technician must not log in to your bank, initiate payments, add payees, approve authentication prompts or ask you to move money to a "safe" account. Close banking apps, payment pages and password managers before work begins. Any bank contact or account changes must be handled privately by you through independently verified official channels.

05 If compromise is suspected

Contact your bank immediately using a trusted number or official app; do not wait for the scan to finish. Use a separate trusted device to change affected account and email passwords and review multi-factor authentication. The technician may recommend disconnecting the affected device to limit further exposure. If evidence may be needed for a bank, insurer or police report, discuss preservation before deleting or cleaning files.

How the service is delivered

Permissions, practical limits, information handling and customer rights

06 Scan permission and additional changes

Acceptance authorises assessment and non-destructive diagnostic scans within the recorded scope. Before scanning, the technician will explain whether a tool automatically quarantines or removes items and obtain approval for that behaviour. Manual removal, system changes, paid software, subscriptions, resets, reinstallation and work outside the scope require separate, recorded approval. You may decline additional work.

07 Backups, disruption and evidence

Scans may use system resources, require restarts, interrupt applications or identify files incorrectly. Malware removal and quarantine can affect applications or access to files. Back up important data where safe and practical, and tell the technician about encryption, essential software, existing damage and prior repair attempts. If a safe backup is unavailable, the technician will explain the risk and agree a next step before changes. This clause does not excuse a failure to use reasonable care and skill.

08 Remote support, if separately approved

Remote access requires your specific approval of the technician, access tool and session. You may end access at any time. Remain available during the session and do not use online banking while it is active. No unattended access, persistent access or session recording is permitted without separate express consent. The technician will end the connection and remove or disable temporary access when work concludes.

09 Privacy and diagnostic information

Only information needed for the service may be accessed or recorded. Unrelated personal files must not be browsed. Reports should use device identifiers and redacted findings, not banking credentials or full account details. The Provider must explain the purpose, storage location, access controls and retention period for retained logs or files before collecting them. No file samples, recordings or identifiable diagnostic data may be uploaded to external services without your specific informed consent. Necessary legal disclosures remain subject to applicable law.

10 Results and limitations

The written outcome will identify tools used, checks completed, detections, approved actions, unresolved concerns and recommended follow-up. Results reflect the device and tools at the time of testing. Some threats may be undetected, and a clear scan does not prove that the device or your banking accounts are secure. Security software does not prevent every scam, credential theft or future infection. These practical limits do not remove legal rights or agreed service obligations.

11 Fees, stopping work and complaints

The quote, currency, applicable taxes, diagnostic charges and any cancellation charge must be disclosed and agreed before work starts. No additional costs or subscriptions may be added without approval. You may withdraw permission or stop work at any time; only disclosed charges for authorised work and lawful agreed cancellation costs may apply. Raise concerns directly with the Provider using the contact details supplied with your booking or quote. The Provider will explain proposed remedies and respond within a reasonable time.

12 Care, responsibility and legal rights

The Provider must use reasonable care and skill and comply with applicable privacy and consumer laws. Nothing here excludes rights or remedies that cannot lawfully be excluded, including applicable consumer guarantees. Your acceptance is not a waiver of claims for negligence, unauthorised access or unlawful conduct. Any dispute is subject to applicable law; these terms do not require you to give up access to regulators or courts.
